

You are here : Home > River > Aquatic Ecology > Life in Aquatic Ecosystems

RAMPRIVERPEOPLERESOURCESENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT

Life in Aquatic Ecosystems

Organisms living in aquatic ecosystems are dependent on the resources of their environment. Biological communities—including the types of animals present and their relative abundance—are also shaped through the interactions with other organisms. This section explores in greater detail the relationships between living organisms and the relationship of living creatures with their environment:

- The Building Blocks of Life
- Energy and Food
- Food Chains and Food Webs
- Biomass and Production

Mallard ducks
Source: Cayla Eastman
(click to enlarge)

Next page: The Building Blocks of Life ►

Website Terms Of Use